Union Falls Pond

Black Brook, Franklin - WMU 5C, 5F

This body of water was formed by an Adirondack entrepreneur named Paul Smith as a hydroelectric power generator. Union Falls Flow is an impoundment on the Saranac River and lies immediately downstream of Franklin Falls Flow. Most of the flow is shallow and rocky, making navigations difficult for outboard motors. The Flow water is stained darkly brown, which doesn't help in spotting rocks.

Along the lake there are several campsites, along with several developed areas.
